

Tiny fossils help us understand ancient environments

Pollen preserves a record of past plant life.

Smithsonian researchers study North American vegetation from about 50 million years ago.

Identifying thousands of specimens by hand takes expert time.

Fossil pollen • expert-labeled specimen